Get boosted before the holidays: More COVID-19 vaccination appointments available at community clinics

Algoma Public Health, Sault Area Hospital, Group Health Centre, and Superior Family Health Team, as part of the Algoma Ontario Health Team, are working together to create more opportunities for Algoma residents to get their COVID-19 booster dose before the holidays and stay up to date on their COVID-19 vaccine series. Protection from your last dose of the COVID-19 vaccine decreases over time. A booster dose increases the defences of your immune system by restoring protection and reducing your risk of severe illness or hospitalization from COVID-19.

“Getting vaccinated is an important and effective layer of protection that can protect you from severe illness,” said Dr. John Tuinema, Acting Medical Officer of Health at Algoma Public Health. “It can take up to two weeks after vaccination before your immune system develops the full benefit from your booster dose. Booking an appointment as soon as you are eligible will help build that protection before the holidays.”

If it has been at least six months since your last COVID-19 vaccine, you are eligible to receive a COVID-19 booster dose.
